Financial Aid at Princeton

Ensuring Affordability

Princeton's financial aid program is recognized as one of the most generous in the country, reflecting our core value of ensuring equality of opportunity to all students, regardless of financial circumstances. As concerns rise about the growing burden of college loans, Princeton students are graduating either debt free or with loan amounts that are the lowest of any major university.

The University is committed to using its resources to attract the most talented students in the world. If admitted, you can be confident that your full financial need, as determined by our financial aid office, will be met. Princeton does not award academic or athletic merit scholarships.

How We Make It Possible

GRANTS, NOT LOANS

Princeton was the first university in the country to institute a "no-loan" policy. Since 2001, every aid package offered by the University has relied on grants, not loans that have to be repaid. The program has assured the continued and growing enrollment of a diverse group of students from low- and middle-income backgrounds.

LOW DEBT

Our no-loan policy has made it possible for most students to graduate with little or no debt. About 75 percent of our students graduate debt free. Of the remaining 25 percent who choose to borrow, usually for additional expenses such as a laptop computer, their average total indebtedness at graduation is about $5,500. For comparison, about 71 percent of college seniors in the United States graduated with loans in 2012, and they carried an average debt of $29,400 (Source: The Project on Student Debt).

AID PACKAGE

The average grant for aid students in the entering Class of 2018 is $42,600. This amount covers more than the $41,820 tuition charge. For families with an annual income of $60,000 or less, the average grant covers 100 percent of their costs for tuition, room and board.

Each student's need is determined individually based on family resources and is met in full with grants and a campus job. The average aid package for a student admitted to the Class of 2018 is $44,700:

95% GRANT AID

($42,600)

5% CAMPUS JOB

($2,100)

NUMBERS OF AWARDS

Princeton will provide awards to more than 3,100 undergraduates, totaling more than $131 million in grants in the 2014–15 academic year. About 60 percent of undergraduates receive aid, a dramatic expansion from more than a decade ago when 38 percent of students received aid. All of those who applied with family incomes up to $180,000 qualified for an aid package to meet their individual amount of need. About 85 percent of those who applied with family incomes up to $200,000 qualified for some aid.

INTERNATIONAL ELIGIBILITY

Princeton is one of only six schools in the country that do not limit financial aid available for international students. The full need of all admitted international students is met the same as it is for students from the United States.

FAQs

Following are a few of the questions we frequently hear from applicants. For more FAQs and for detailed information about financial aid found in the Undergraduate Financial Aid Information and Application Instructions PDF, visit our website: www.princeton.edu/admission/financialaid.

In the last decade, the amount of our average need-based grant increased by more than 90 percent, about twice as much as the amount of tuition increases for the same period.

How to Apply

Domestic and international students submit their family's information on the Princeton Financial Aid Application, which is available online beginning Oct. 1 at www.princeton.edu/admission/financialaid/apply\_financial\_aid. Register for a login account and complete your application by the appropriate deadline.

File the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) online at www.fafsa.ed.gov by April 15.

Provide supporting documents to the financial aid office. Parents' most recent federal income tax returns and W-2 statements (or the equivalent for non-filers) are required. We suggest you fax these documents to the aid office at 609-258-0336 by March 15. Non-custodial parents may be required to submit a separate application. For more detailed information, see the Undergraduate Financial Aid Information and Application Instructions PDF at www.princeton.edu/admission/financialaid.

Will applying for aid hurt my chance of being admitted to Princeton?

No. There is no disadvantage whatsoever in the admission process for financial aid applicants.

How do you decide who gets financial aid?

Financial aid is awarded based on need only. We use the information you supply on your financial aid application to determine how much support we will provide. We do not offer merit-based aid.

Before I apply, can I get a sense of whether I might qualify for aid?

Yes. Just enter your financial information into the Princeton Financial Aid Estimator for a quick idea of how much aid you may be qualified to receive.
